Hello to any Aboriginal Torres Strait Islander First Nations people tuning in and we acknowledge all the lands were stolen and never ceded. Always was always will be Aboriginal land.

I'm Sally Goldner, I use the pronoun she and her and I host this show Out of the Pan which covers pansexual issues; I like to call it knowing no boundaries of sex or gender and there's lots of ways to get in touch with the show. You can do so on out of the pan 855 at gmail.com, you can SMS 61456751215. You can look on Twitter Mastodon, Bluesky and Instagram for at salgoldsaidso; on Facebook out of the pan 3 CR 855 am Melbourne and my personal page. Sally Goldner. Remember any opinions I express on the show are strictly my own. You can also snail mail and you can do that to P O Box 1277. Collingwood 3066. Don't think they'll be any content notes planned on the show today or that could come up but if so we'll do it on an as-needed basis.

And well I've been to get Jessi Ryan on the line. I can rhyme and it's not a crime very very soon to talk about the Midsummer show QRAVE with spelt with a Q queer rave, there's some queer thinking for you but in the meantime until I'm just having a couple of technical issues here and there or those sorts of things, communications issues to be precise.

The news of the week, of course, is that the Australian Bureau of Statistics for the firsttime released stats on the number of LGBTI Australians. And I think this is overall very good news. And what makes me say that is that while the figure overall may seem lower than what some people were expecting for a long time we've had the one in ten approach. I think when we look into it very a little more with a little more depth will find that we are close to that.

Now what do I mean by all that, what that's the question is that the stats revealed that 4.9 percent of Australians, overall identify a 4.5%. I beg your pardon. I can once more of slightly rhyming situation, 4.5 percent of Australian, 16 years and older LGBTI, plus over 900,000 people. Now, you might say, isn't that lower? But I think the critical factor comes in where it says, you know, sort of that the figure for younger people is much higher and that at that figures up at around nine percent. And I think therein lies the, the the rub because you know, the what you know, older people, the stats, the numbers dropped down as we go through the age cohorts, which there's a very simple logical explanation that older people have faced more discrimination heard. More negativity seen felt more negativity which ever since you want to want to, you sort of use there and perhaps a less likely to disclose things be out, be trusting, all those sorts of things.

And I think that, once we start looking at that way that had they not older, people not had to endure. That had said, people, you know, sort of being able to be more out. We'd find that a more consistent number across the whole population. So I think that's the first thing that I would sort of coming there is that, you know, the the I think the figure does put things, relatively low overall want to say, put it low, it is what it is. I'm not denying that but I think that, you know, better here in a better world and more Ideal World, whatever you want to call it. We would have more people disclosing and it would be a lot higher.

So I think this is good news on a number of levels. First of all, that we have the stats because we haven't had this bigger comprehensive nationwide survey before in that there's been very good Victorian state surveys, which do come up with similar risk numbers overall, and the exact figure for people in the 16 to 25 year old bracket 16 to 24 bracket is 9.5%, you've then got 25 to 34 year old 7.5%, and then it drops to between one and a half. And four percent between the remaining age cohorts, with 1.4 percent of 75 plus has identified as one or more of LGBTI+ to use the language of this survey. So I think there's definitely something to be said there that in sort of in what is going on. That certainly there's a lot more sort of, you know, people who probably will not disclosing not able to be themselves.

If not, I will say either unwilling and or unable to be themselves and then we drill into the survey even more in terms of sexual orientation. 43% using gay lesbian 46% using bisexual and 11% using a different term asexual or pansexual. If we trust talking sexual / sexual orientation to use the language of this survey, which really has to put an end to bi+-erasure. And anyone who still has those views who's not bisexual I think really has to have a look at themselves and there is no excuse now, for not having more by specific policy and programs and by run by specific programs run by plus organizations declaring. Any possible interest as a Committee Member of what is now Bi Plus Pride Victoria formerly known as Bisexual Alliance Victoria, which is merging with Melbourne Bisexual Network. And this is something that bi+ people though have campaigned for for a long time to just get on the board and I don't know how the 11% breaks down in terms of asexual pansexual and all the term valid terms involved. But if we even to assume I think reasonably three or four percent, we're close to half of the rainbow in terms of sexual orientation is multi-gender attracted.

To the T of interest to me, .9 of 1% trans or gender diverse. Now, of course, we don't know about overlap here and intersectionality is one factor that we don't know about, which may keep the figures overall a bit lower. And then point three percent born with variations of sex characteristics. Now I'm think again, the trans percentage could be higher again, we know if the sadly of the current climate in around the world and to some extent, Australia so-called Australia with what is going on against trans people and point three percent of one percent with intersects, which sort of goes against the long-held estimates of around 1.7 percent. But again, who, how many people are disclosing is the data collection the best. It could be all these lots of things need to be considered and in terms of intersectionality with a hammer, I haven't got my calculator at hand but three and four non-binary people under the T. If we're saying trans being trans, gender diverse non-binary plus, three point, three and 75% of non-binary is LGBTQ+ fit compared to 15% of trans men, 21% of trans women, 3 percent of cis men 4% of cis women. So that I think that shows something that I've bet we've been saying for years, that trans the T in the be are the binary Buster's in so many ways. It says here that LGBTIQ+ people more likely to live in metros than regional and remote.

Again I wonder if that's safety factors in people feel people feeling unsafe to disclose more likely to be born in Australia 21% born overseas, which I think is parallel to the population overall 5%, speak a language other than English gender diversity. This was of interest in that, we're close to the proverbial Kaleidoscope. We've always sort of said existed 33% non-binary slightly more trans men than trans women is their male privilege, in a sense going on there. Of course transmitted and every person needs to be themselves but is it easier to sort of go down the trans men path than the trans women path younger people. Again, more likely to identify in this area and the ABS did Health surveys to focus on this. Just how they got there, but it's not a census as such but it's still pretty big relevant data. And I think you know it's just shows again the silliness and the travesty that was the debate that happened in the mid year on.

Census and how we had to struggle to get sexual orientation and gender identity. And it should be added that this is only 16 plus, which doesn't really talk about, you know, sort of where we're going with the younger people. It would be very interesting if there was a way to somehow say that was all.

You know, sort of dots eyes dotted and T's crossed. And I'm not talking you to sex and trans, but we are talking all of LGBTI not just int. How could we find out about young people? Because there's lots of implications for health, first, and foremost for basic well-being, but also, I think there's some political implications here. And yeah, the fabulous Jenny's come in with a good question, which I also know

Bring up an interesting survey. Optimistic Melbourne beats Sydney, with numbers of people who identify as queer, thoughts. And why is this the case and wishing you happy holidays? To or first of all, happy holidays to you and everyone back at sure. If those youngish people say. But I think that I have an answer. It's to why Melbourne and also a Victoria and to be fair full credits, the ACT have gone ahead is I think that the generally more Progressive and more inclusive of BTIQ+ then, the more conservative often sort of corporate top-down Sydney, which seems to be relatively behind. I mean, it's great this year that New South Wales, finally caught up a lot of its anti-discrimination laws. So that overall, the eight states and territories are now relatively even on critical laws, but they have been behind for a long time. So I think that's one Ttheory.

The other is that which I've held onto for some time is that one of them also successful jurisdictions in Australia is Tasmania. I think it's the combination of in a seat and Tasmania smaller population. Makes it easy to reach and know people even smaller geographic, areas and Victoria which would probably be one of the three. Smallest geographic areas of the eight states and territories sure we've got the second biggest population, but it's still not too far to travel. You can hello to Mildura and Mallacoota, but you can pretty much get to most of Victoria within about three hours on a road. And, you know, sort of what is it? Six to eight hours. If you're heading to Mildura, or Mallacoota, give or take up or down with the appropriate rest stops, and please drive safely and use the road safely over the holiday season, everyone.

So I think it's the combination of smaller area, smaller relatively small, populations and Progressive governments. And the fact the Tasmania which has succeeded in getting reforms through under even, when they had their has been the Liberals have been the largest party in the lower house. I think might be a part of that Journey. So heaven forbid logic one of these novel concepts in this day and age, but I'll try it anyway. So yeah, there's my thoughts and I'm going to I'll see if I can get, Jessi Ryan on the line once again. If not, I'll talk more about this because it's a good bit of good news to end the year

A pause in the meantime, let's have a listen to another track from Wendy rRules. Most recent release Meadowlark here is the opening track on the release and the title track. Meadowlark 3, CR 855 am 3 CR Digital 3, CR dot org dot au, 3 CR on demand out of the pan with Sally.

3 CR is a community radio licensed. You're listening to 3 CR Community radio 855 am visit the 3 CR website at 3 CR. Dot-org today you forward slash podcast to hear the most recent recording from each show or 3 CR dot-org do their you forward slash streaming to listen lifve.

That's how you keep listening to 3 CR, which of course, will be broadcasting 24/7. Even if we're not doing new program, will programming throughout the southern hemisphere summer in that. I've lined up lots of specials repeats and lots of other programs or have some summer specials, for example, Freedom of species will be doing a show today on Reddit covering all forms of social justice and advocacy. Not just the animal advocacy. So they're doing something different and do all sorts of Summer programming. So how have you listened? You still got plenty of quality and quantity to to Joy on 3, CR over the coming period. And

Prior to the messages, we heard from Wendy Rule her most recent release and Meadowlark the title track of that release beautiful as always. So let's continue on with this situation of what's going on with the Australian Bureau of Statistics stats. What let's we could crunch numbers all day. Yeah sort of let's just one other sort of state-by-state period, and I think Western Australia was a little lower than the average and that's concerning given the large geographical area. The isolation type of issues could be a fact, would be a factor there, but again, this gives us a row, you know, the bit of a road map, at least on where we need to go, but what are the implications of this? Well, there's one that we know if there are sort of, if we start really Crunching, all the numbers and looking at which states and territories are down in which of lgbtq. And I where there's variations, you know, sort of, you know where that's going on. But it also want to point out that in terms of just this survey 20% of people identify as transgender diverse non-binary, so that's not the whole population of so-called Australia. That's the number of survey participants which is still pretty high and seven percent of the survey numbers experience intersex or born with variation of sex characteristics and I think that there's some gaps. It also shows issues for seniors and middle cohort that we've still got such low percentages, that drop from 25.

Thirty-five-year-old 7.5% disguising way down to 3.9 percent. And in my cohort, the 55 to 64 2.3, then it keeps getting smaller. And the ACT per capita has 5.7 percent of the population, wa the smallest per capita, of course, not absolute numbers, but allowing for the smaller populations places like the Northern Territory.

Rhetoric. So you know things to work on there and it's also noted that the Australian Figures were similar to 2023. New Zealand census data in terms of sexual orientation, slightly New Zealand, slightly lower on trans. But as I say there's health and policy implications but what about other political implications?

This will, If instead of it is this figure of nine percent Youth, and four and a half percent of the population. That's and our families and supporters if lgbtiq a plus, is an issue. Can we make if it isn't can't, we make it one because there's got to be some clout to swing some seats there. And I think that's something that political parties are going to have to note and risk of being little cynic sounding cynical.

Maybe this is why, you know, there's an underlying factor in terms of the recently applied social media ban that younger people are feeling more independent. I will have to turn them back to traditional media, that's more conservative and generally speaking more less supportive will say of lgbtiq a plus. Hmm, can't help being a little force, a thoughtful and that one. But parties are going to have to listen and if they don't now get off their Bunsies now, they can the two larger parties at particularly, the national level I won't speak for every state and territory here. They cannot keep losing voters and so they're going to have to start doing more and doing better. And not being so well week on these issues and poor quality and throwing us under the bus, particularly trans and intersex because the there isn't enough to just and the Recently released LGBTIQ+ health plan, which was released last week, which is a nice document that it's full of warm and fuzzy statements. No strategies, no Targets in terms of numerical and declaring the interest again, on the Committee Member of just equal Australia, which was critical of that and interested to see a lot of large National, but non-lgbtq specific bodies emerged this week supporting the plan has have has endured

And to quote another radio presenter on another station years ago. Have we hit a nerd or a nerve or something? I think there's something going on there and it's not good enough. We, we don't need plans anymore, we don't need research. We've got plenty of national research. And to just When people's, I will do research, it's a way of kicking the can down the road. I'll, but we're speaking seen to do something and I really have a huge problem with that with that plan, personally, speaking, as an individual,

On that front that we need more than that and this is just playing maybe it's playing to Queensland voters or something. Maybe it's don't scare the horses. I mean I'm not going to predict a federal election result, but from what I hear, every sort of Polly's saying the likely outcome of the federal election is a hung Parliament, more likely with labor as the largest of the large of the two larger parties and that also leads to political implications, whilst I believe that a large part of the Cross, Brent, current crossbench in the lower house is supportive of lgbtq+, particularly greens, and climate change. 200 comment letter. Commonly referred to as teals, you know, why are we working on this? Here's our chance.

So there's plenty of implications of all of this whilst the primary issue is Health well-being and life certainly we need some sort of to have a strategy so to speak and you know sort of get get get cracking then I mean there is a federal election. Do most likely in the first half of next year and all this information together, we have to really push hard.

Now, I know a few weeks ago, people were saying the, you know, the results in the United States will obviously have some flow through here. Yes, they will. We can I just say? I think we can try to be proactive and assertive as opposed to aggressive and counter. That welcome, everyone's thoughts on that. And we do have some messages in. As I remember to check my SMS line roving reporter has misjudged in a few times. We're more open to queer people in Melbourne. Especially amongst Elite institutions like the ngv whether it's more, queer representation. There we have openly, queer politicians like Harriet Shing and Steve Demopolis Etc. Teenage queer events. Run by -18 at the National Gallery. Representation is key. Yes what is it? You can't be what you can't see. And sadly politicians like macron. Who is just exposed for a sexist and homophobic. Remarks are really disappointing

Yeah, going overseas to France there there look, I think that we have done relatively well in Victoria, we got moving throughout the 2000s and the first part of the 2010s while there was a chance and got a lot of things on the board and have largely locked them in obviously, I suppose that lead someone will probably ask this, so I'll try to be intuitive implications of the more redeeming outcome of a week ago. They still talk.

Talk in the papers about John Pescutto's leadership being under threat and what would that mean for state politics in Victoria? As you do is a moderate overall, he's tried to kill. He's taken a better line than a lot of state and federal liberal leaders on Rainbow issues of the Victorian state to be precise and federal leaders and any change in leadership to my amateur knowledge, would likely be more conservative, but whether that would make a difference, you know, whether the is it, the liberal party that's on the nose, or is it the L? Well, there's a lot of focus on leadership, nowadays, you know, and, of course, we're two years away from a state election, a lot in nineteen ninety percent, ninety eight percent probability, given our fixed terms November 2026. So anything could happen on any side of politics there. Which of course, is not my province. But the thing is yet, we are generally doing well in Victoria, we need to remember that, but it's also a, the fact that Victoria has got a head I think, is something that we need to sort of say, hey, if Victoria can do it, is it really that different anywhere else?

Despite what perceptions you know, I mentioned the Queensland problem or other community latest refer to sometimes the Western Sydney is problem and these my there may be less support, but do you drag down the whole nation or in an at terms of national politics? Just for that, I'm not sure what the answer is in the meantime. Let's have some more musics and follow plus. I haven't played this track for a while. It's a bit of a mystical favorite but not too spooky, he is Graeme Connors and Black Mountain, from the from the back country album. 3 CR 855 AM 3 CR Digital 3, CR dot-org, w3c out and demand out of the pan with Sally.

3 CR 855 am 3 CR Digital 3, CR dot org, dot U 3 CR on demand out of the pan with Sally first broadcasting known through one every Sunday afternoon. Thanks for your company. Grant, Connors and Black Mountain, from his album, way back in, do not that far back 2018 and from the backcountry and mysterious track.

Continuing on the theme of well, Victoria and queer and and political stuff. A couple more messages in from roving reporter. And I might have to declare a number of interests on one of your queries and not answer it directly roving and that is, you know, sort of and the fact that there is a trans person earlier, in the year, tried to run for a federal seat for the liberal party. And now look, I think it's, you know, yes, you know, queer people of course will have all sorts of political views from across the right and left and back and forward. So to speak. And the question is, I suppose can one person create change from the inside. is this a is the saying, you know, how far do you go now? I know there's been plenty of small L liberal types, who have tried.

And let's look at something regardless of what we might think about it. How far did even a cisgender gay man. Like, Tim Wilson get, I mean, the fact that the liberal still keep lurching, I've lunched so far to the right, and some might say are going further right in some jurisdictions obviously noting and about Peter Dutton can one trans person have influence. When cisgender gay men or cisgender women still seem so far. It's sort of removed the loot, and they Liberal Party seems so poor. And so that would be my answer to that one in a more general sense of can trans people have any influence, the obvious interest that I have in your question as written in is as a founder of transgender Victoria just declaring that interest John Pescutto well comments, there about his leadership. After the whole more daring deeming situation and you know, sort of is the state Liberal Party divided. Well, that's a fair question there. Obviously is division. He, you know, look, I know. I've got to be careful about what I say.

Given that we now have a court case, even if it is completed, you know, I look, I think that there's, obviously something went amuck somewhere from his point of view and yeah, sorry, I just lost my train of thought there. One of those moments things looking pretty messy and whether, you know, things will happen in early in the new year we'll have to wait and see. But you know it's just I think this is part of the problem is there's so much two things I'd say about. The Victorian Liberal Party and politics in general, there's so much focus on the leader and not enough on policy. Maybe that's the way things have become things, have become so presidential eyes, Dover many, many years to borrow an American term that we don't look at policy enough I think is problematic, but the other thing about the direct situation. There was a good article on this. I think was on sub stack during the week that the issue that's been lost underneath this, you know, sort of, you know, underneath this issue is the fact that there were this all started at, what was a rally that seemed to have view will say that had views against trans people?

And regardless of whether they were invited or who was associated with her, which I'm clearly not commenting on, not you people. Imitating Nazis, turned up at of anti-trans rally, and that doesn't help people doesn't help trans people. Yet that issue seems to have been buried by a lot of media. And as I say there was a good article on this during the week if I can find it because I'm here it is. It's over.

On not the no-nonsense newsletter, which is on Substack, which you do have to subscribe to us if I can post the link to it in by Patrick Lenton. Substack.com is where you can look for it, and it's called gate-crashing The Verdict. What everyone has wrong about deeming and pursued? Oh, well, not so much wrong, but that's the headline of this article, I'd say, what's been overlooked, which is problematic, Jenny

He's messaged in and sort of telepathically, well touched on something here, do I think, if Tim Wilson gets re-elected, it will make any difference to look. Now, I don't really know if Tim will take a lot of initiative. You might be able to hold some of the extremism, is it? But it's extreme more extreme elements of the federal Coalition at Bay. But is that really enough just to hold back hate? I suppose it's better than not holding it back but cat.

And can one person really do a lot? No matter how logical persuasive Charming or anything, any other quality, they have you know two to sort of make a difference. I suppose. It depends how glass-half-full we want to be time for some more music and if I can make sure this one wants to come up,

Where did it go? This time came my way a few weeks ago and the fabulous in your face with Jaden's a couple of weeks ago. Interviewed the artist Sweeney about this track, which I liked, because this person contributed a lot to music in the 80s, but Joanna pigott and the track is called Joanna in the 80s. Stories blasting delusion about children track in tunnels. That's how we got our zq it seems and now everything else. I mean now it's just a six-month pipeline from that to Australians who live in this alternate American fantasy land where they post about Donald Trump the time. So its ability to provide a save the children. Stuff to get a whole range of different political Persuasions in. It is what I found fascinating, you know, I talk a lot in the Aussie Cube videos of it. Out your auntie she might not be that far right wing now but she might be quite left. She might just be a spiritual hippie type but this is Broad appeal to things like save the children and great Awakenings is almost a hippie like quality to it particularly when your tone down the whole Maga element of tradition here and it's getting people in there but Q is not just a conspiracy theory is it is this conspiracy theory that is meant to drag you right after a few months so

And our last track live track for the year on out of the pan which comes from Dragon is appropriate. I love this one wasn't written or co-written by Joanna. It's so I'm an album where there certainly are Tracks will be summer by dragon from Bondi Road as we head into it. It is that time of year where I think everyone has the 3 CR listeners, the awesome listeners because as I always say we don't have regular listeners at 3 CR, just the awesome ones. Thank you to all the contributors to the show throughout the year

And the last messages I can get to for you roving. Josh Burns came out strongly against Nazis, who I think of being on the steps of Parliament the anti-semitic banner, he's done. I think a good job on that issue and as for Peter Dutton's attacks on him or regardless of your politics, that's wrong. And right reminds people that Tim Wilson was a Libertarian and advocating for a staunch freedom of speech, agenda. And it's back for for the hate against the Jewish Community. Are this is, and well, this is a quote from one of our listeners. Tim Wilson's hypocrisy is outstanding, and I don't mean probably, that's not mean to outstanding in a good way, but yeah, thank you for all your thoughtful comments throughout the year.

Particularly roving and Jenny Kayleen anyone who's written in John as our awesome listeners but you're all awesome. It's always it's been wonderful doing the show during the year for every reason. I just wish everyone a really safe and happy season or whatever it is be kind to yourself. Be kind to everyone else, lets you know, sort of get through the season, be safe, whatever you do on the road, it's partying anything else you do? And I've got as I say summer specials line or out of the pan repeats lined up until February, the 2nd Pride March and scheduled to be back live on February the 9th. Thanks, I'm sorry. Thanks. Thanks for your support everyone throughout the year, I'll take it out today with Dragon from Bondi Road and Summer which were of course we're in the middle of right at the solstice.

Thanks for tuning in to Out of the Pan. I'm Sally Goldner catch your live next year.
